Dan Gerber’s poetry is marked by a boundless curiosity and deep compassion that marries European Romanticism with American Zen. Whether studying an ancient damselfly trapped in amber or trying to comprehend nuanced memories, Gerber’s poems present the world in ways both familiar and startling.

“The purity of [Gerber’s] language and the sharpness of his attention present landscape, event, and feeling as one.” —W.S. Merwin

Tuesday, October 24 • 7:00–8:00pm
MSU Main Library, Green Room (W449)

MSU alumnus Dan Gerber is the author of nine collections of poetry, three novels, a book of short stories, and two books of nonfiction. A former professional race-car driver, he has traveled extensively as a journalist, particularly in Africa.

MSU Press is proud to publish six books by Dan Gerber, including fiction, poetry, and A Second Life: A Collected Nonfiction.